Speaker One: Welcome to the City History podcast. This is episode number 4. Today's city is Sandy, UT.		City History - Sandy.m4v
Speaker Two: Did you know that Sandy is named for the thirsty soil in the area.
Speaker One: Sandy was settle in the late 1860's. It's beginnings were as a farming community. At one point in time almost all of Sandy was owned by just two families. The Allsops and the Youngs.
Speaker Two: Sandy later became valuable as a supply station for the mining efforts in Little Cottonwood Canyon. Eventually three smelters operated in Sandy.
Speaker One: After mines failed in the late 1800's, Sandy once again turned to agriculture to keep viable. Those days are pretty much gone now as business and light industry have become the staples of Sandy's economy.
